“...Man becomes what he thinks about...”
Goodman (The Miracle Man)

I will never forget as a young professional, I one day found myself on the elevator with EVP of Credit Administration. He asked me how things were going in the training program and I responded accordingly with the politically correct answer. Before exiting, he asked me about the small pendant I was wearing. It was a #1. I responded that if I don't believe I'm #1, no one else will. It starts with me.” He smiled and said he would keep that in mind. And to have a great day.” It was.

I have had many of these types of conversations over the years. Some were meant to discourage, but most to re-enforce my position of self-awareness.

The bottom line is that because I believed then and continue to affirm greatness, my goals are always attainable. Like becoming the CEO, having the honor to receive an appointment on a corporate board at the age of 34 and a minority shareholder in a billion dollar company. The doubters do not have a map or reservation on my journey.
