

Life Transitions Blog #31

When I transition from this place called earth, only those prepared to come to celebrate the “party of life” need RSVP. “Party Poopers need not respond.”

I have not fooled myself that there is a right side to the dash that defines my life. But when that moment arrives, I want to celebrate the fun we had and the legacy to be carried forward.

My commitment is to leave this place having created a legacy that makes people smile when they hear my name.

“Someone once said... People will remember you not for what you did, but for how you made them feel.”
