

Detours Blog 27

“On another Sunday, my Senior Pastor said, ‘What you consider your failure is really your short term detour... Don’t Dwell on them Too Long”

We tend to spend so much time counting the number of times that we have failed when we really need to see them as unfound successes. I am sure that we all have had detours along our journeys up the corporate and/or professional ladders. I must admit that some of my detours were big enough to derail my excursion. But instead of stopping my journey, my support system stepped in and kept me going. As mentioned in earlier blogs, you need to have business associates, true friends and family and a spiritual community in place to ensure that detours are short lived.

“I have had my share of detours and even more direct arrivals.
Life is VERY GOOD!!!