

Out of the Mouths of Our Little Ones Blog #15

This is dedicated to my daughter Courtney Michelle, the inspiration for all that I do and the reason I started my company, CMA Enterprise Incorporated.

I can still see clearly my daughter and I playing our daily game of "What did you learn today."

Now 30+ with her own children, I see that the tradition continues. Courtney is raising her son and daughter as I raised her. And she is teaching them to be inquisitive and steadfast in deciding who they are and/or will become. In my opinion, she has become a phenomenal woman in training. And is now learning that she can have it all if she chooses to do so without sacrificing what is important... her family, her spirituality and her desire to achieve her goals.

Getting back to our daily game... when she was approximately 2 years old, she said one of the most inspirational statements I had ever heard and to this day i govern myself by it.

"Mommy, you are Black and anything is possible."

I have never stopped believing this affirmation. And it has become one of my favorite.

Out of the mouth of little ones comes wisdom and inspiration. We also don't give them the credit they deserve. I have been told that babies are born with all the knowledge that they need to go through life. We just have to help them wake it up. What I never shared with her was that I really needed to hear that lift on that day to carry me forward.

Thank you Tutti. Agape Love.
